

EXPECT SHOW-DOWN ON "GAS" TAX FOR UNEMPLOYED FUND

Will Present Bill Calling For
Levy of One Cent
Per Gallon

PINCHOT WANTS 2 CENTS

Various Other Proposals Are To Be Submitted to Raise Money

By Joseph A. Loftis

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
HARRISBURG, Nov. 2.—(INS)—A proposal to levy an emergency gasoline tax to raise revenue for unemployment relief is due for a showdown at the special session of the Legislature which convenes here next week.

This was definitely assured today with the announcement of Rep. James T. Heffran, Washington county, that he has prepared and will introduce a bill calling a special tax of one cent per gallon, the revenue derived to provide work on Pennsylvania's rural township highway system.

Simultaneous with Heffran's announcement came Gov. Gifford Pinchot's formal summons for the extra ordinary session and his legislative program including the proposal for an emergency tax on gasoline at the rate of two cents per gallon for two years. At least a half dozen Senators and Representatives have submitted various proposals to the Executive, ranging from reforestation and highway projects to the imposition of a tax on cigarettes similar to that now obtaining in Ohio.

That the Governor is giving serious and careful consideration to all proposals advanced was indicated by his recent conferences here with floor leaders of both branches of the Legislature.

Just how the organized motoring public will react to the move to boost the price of gasoline is not definite. In a recent public expression, Harrisburg Motor Club officials viewed the proposed excise in an unfavorable light.

Officials of the Pennsylvania Motor Federation declined to comment as individuals upon the issue. S. Edward Gable, of Lancaster, president of the Federation, said he expects to get the views of the executive board before placing the organization on record.

The board is made up of 22 members representing 88 clubs in the State, and observers see in their anticipated decision a fairly definite forecast of the fate awaiting a gasoline tax bill.

This particular piece of legislation, according to its sponsors, is one of the propositions getting the Governor's most serious attention. The Executive himself was reported to be quietly studying public sentiment regarding the measure.

Heffran's one-cent tax bill would be purely an emergency measure. The bill would remain on the statute books until the end of the calendar year of 1933, when it would automatically expire.

It is intended, Heffran said, that revenue from this tax "will be used on construction of roads in the rural highway system and will be only for labor wages of those employed—not for construction machinery or supplies." He added:

"Basically it would provide work for the ordinary laborer at the present rate of wages without drawing from the highway department's present funds, excepting, of course, for supplies and construction material."

"Thousands of men could be given jobs through the medium of the additional one cent tax and more than 20,000 miles of unimproved rural roads could be included in the schedule for construction or resurfacing."

"Crushed stone or secondary construction roads would be built and the highway department called upon to pay only for materials and for use of equipment."

At least one member of the upper branch is known thus far to have committed himself favorably toward the proposal to levy an additional temporary tax on gasoline—Senator Leon C. Frince, of Carlisle.

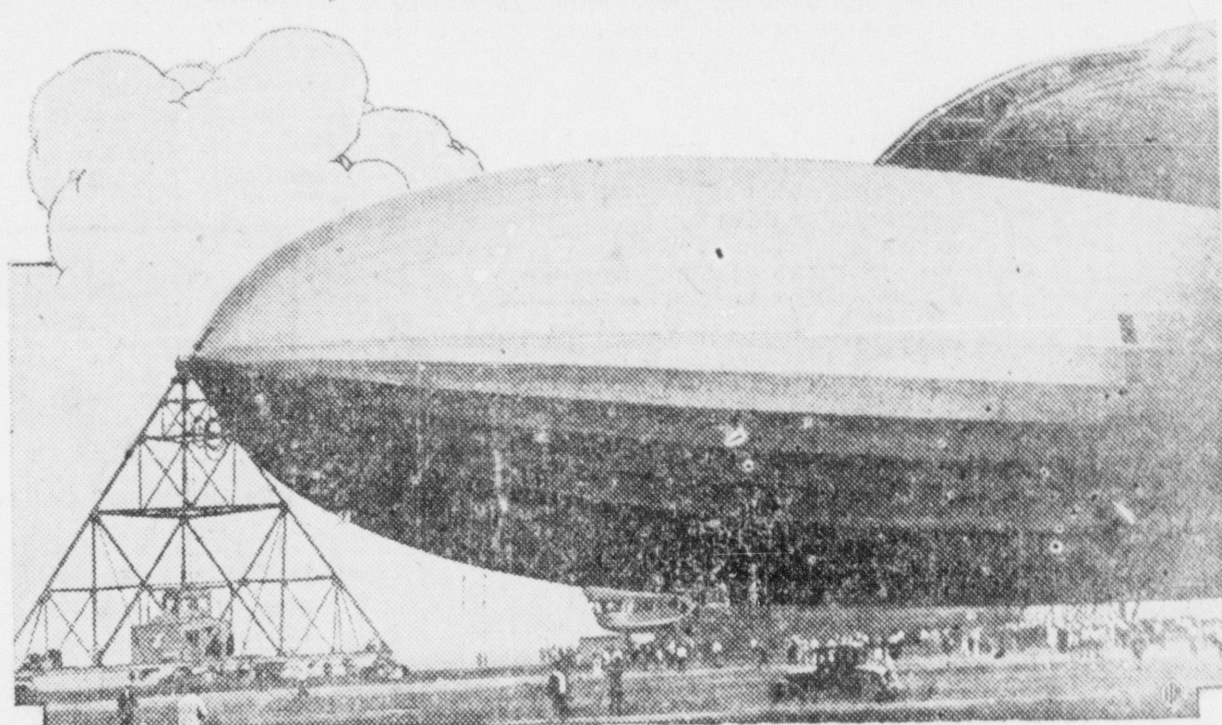

Senator Frince, without specifying the amount of the excise he would favor, said he believed it would be the least burdensome form of relief legislation and probably would be found the least objectionable. He opposed the added tax two years ago but believes an emergency warranting its enactment now exists.

WILSONS HOSTS

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Wilson, of 335 Walnut street, entertained friends at a Halloween party at their home Saturday evening. A delightful evening was spent playing games, followed by refreshments. A large bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums, formed the centerpiece on the table and the rooms were decorated with the orange and black crepe paper.

Mrs. Martha McGuire, of Philadelphia, is making an extended visit with Miss Anna Schaffer, of 567 Bath street.

HELLO, BRISTOL! I'LL BE SEEING MORE OF YOU!

The Akron, the world's largest airship, flew over Bristol this afternoon at about one o'clock, taking a zig-zag course so that residents in all the surrounding area could view it. The huge dirigible left Philadelphia at 12.30 and followed the river, then struck out at various angles. The Akron was followed by the Los Angeles and a comparative view of the relative size of the two giants of the air was plainly visible.

VOTERS TO CHOOSE COUNTY OFFICERS

Election to Be Held Tomorrow from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m.

IMPORTANT ELECTION

Voters tomorrow will go to the polls to vote for county and some local officers. The most important, however, are the county officers who are to be chosen to administer the affairs of Bucks County for next four years.

In Bristol one councilman is to be chosen from each of the respective wards along with ward officials who are also to be named. Contests are lacking within the borough and this has had a tendency to make the election a quiet one. Polls will be open from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m.

The election is important, however, from a county standpoint, as it directly affects the control of the county's affairs for the next four years and "there are numerous reasons why the voters of the county should go to the polls and support the Republican candidates," says the Republican County Committee in a statement issued to the voters.

Continuing the statement reads:

"The Republican ticket is headed by Hon. Calvin S. Boyer, candidate for Judge, who during the sixteen months he has been upon the bench has made an enviable record and shown his qualifications and fitness for this important judicial office."

"Space will not permit a detailed recital of the qualifications of the other fourteen candidates on the Republican county ticket nominated at the Primary Election, but we assure you that all of them, from Sheriff to County Auditor, are persons of the highest character, integrity and ability and in every way qualified to fulfill the duties of the offices to which they aspire."

"Bucks county, under Republican administration for a number of years, with friendly contacts with the Republican administration at Harrisburg has made wonderful progress."

"The affairs of the county in the past have been efficiently and economically administered at a minimum cost to the tax-payers."

"Roads and bridges have been constructed, public improvements made and the business of the county conducted under the supervision of especially well qualified officials. The Republican candidates this year are just as well qualified as those now in office, assuring, in the event of their election, continued capable management of the public business of the county. A Democratic victory at the polls this year would retard the progress of the county for many years to come."

"The result of this year's election will depend entirely upon how well the Republican vote is polled, and we must not permit our previous majorities to influence us and become indifferent."

MISS GRACE BURROUGHS AT COURIER'S SCHOOL

Will Lecture Here on November 10, 11th, 12th and 13th

IN ST. JAMES'S HALL

Miss Grace Burroughs, of the De Both Home Makers' Schools, is scheduled to appear in Bristol on November 10th, 11th, 12th and 13th, under the auspices of The Bristol Courier. To the women of this vicinity that statement tells a story. Its few words add to their store of cookery knowledge—to take a post graduate course, in the most important feminine activity—an activity that has been woman's own since man discovered fire and applied it to food.

The mere fact they will have a very good time acquiring the knowledge, will combine fun and gay entertainment with instruction, is beside the matter. Even those who attend the De Both cookery and home makers' lectures and demonstrations to be entertained cannot fail to acquire knowledge. It is there before their eyes and no matter what mood was upon them when they enter the hall the amazing and fascinating results drawn from oven and burner are impressed upon mind and ambition. No woman watching Miss Burroughs bring perfection from a blending of raw materials but what desires to emulate her. Time was when man laughed at cooking schools and not a few women scornfully declared they needed no "schooling" to do what they had been taught in girlhood by a mother who was a "good cook."

The trouble with that group was they remembered mother's triumph but they didn't remember mother's failures and the mothers who cooked by rule of thumb and guess work all too often had fallen cakes, doughy crusts, tough meats, burnt dishes and preparations that looked and tasted well enough but were sinister creators of every form of digestive ailment.

"Consider it a food value first," says Miss Burroughs. "Then think of taste and last the appearance." All of her offerings, and there are scores of them ranging from great roasts to the most dainty of bridge luncheon tid bits, are built on that blue print of cookery. "If a food isn't good for anything," she adds, "in fact instead of being a body asset it becomes a dangerous liability." The De Both Home Makers' Schools never make or recommend a food or dish that doesn't pass a rigid examination as to its digestive qualities, its body building forces and its ability to assimilate with other foods. Once those tests have been passed then the matter of making the dish a delight to the palate is taken up and after that she becomes the food artist painting a picture to delight the eye of a hungry man, in fact a picture that will create hunger.

She offers nothing beyond the abilities of the ordinary housewife. The most delightful of cakes, sauces, pies, meat combinations are as simple as the making of corn meal mush—provided the maker follows instructions. There are certain things to do and a certain time in which to do them. That in all, it was the old fashioned methods of cookery wherein the cook guesses at what she was doing that made things complicated.

Any man—one who has never tried an egg, for instance—can produce a four story cake appetizing enough to make the mouth water without even rolling his coat and at the first trial—if he follows instructions. The men who have gone into the kitchen and messed about in an effort to produce a meal when wife was away may look upon this statement with distrust. But they need only stop to remember they went about things without knowing what they were attempting. They "guessed" at every thing they did.

EIGHT DAY PATROL ABOARD THE COAST GUARD CUTTER MOJAVE BRINGS THRILLING EXPERIENCE TO JOAN LOWELL, AUTHORESS FROM BUCKS COUNTY

Special Permission Accorded Writer of 'Cradle of the Deep' to Be Part of Dangerous Work Performed by the Coast Guards — Tells of Trailing of 'Rummy'

Eight days Joan Lowell spent with the Coast Guardsmen, and this is the first of a series of stories and thrills by the romantic authoress who was born aboard ship and who recounted her seafaring girlhood in the story, "Cradle of the Deep." The first woman ever permitted to be a part of the dangerous work performed by the Coast Guard, Joan Lowell received special permission from Washington for the purpose. She passes on to you her exciting experiences.

Miss Lowell has a residence at New Hope, Bucks County, and spends a portion of her time there.

By Joan Lowell

BOSTON, Nov. 2.—(INS)—Through the courtesy of Admiral W. H. Billard, in Washington, and the Division Commander, Capt. H. T. Munter, of Boston, I was granted permission to go on a ten-day patrol aboard the cutter Mojave.

The instructions to Capt. Stanley V. Parker, commanding the Mojave, the flagship of the patrol, were that I was to be given an opportunity to see the Coast Guard in active service.

He was asked to give me facts pertaining to all the maneuvers of the Coast Guard and give me a first hand impression of their activities.

How well those ends were accomplished is shown by the fact that in one week, cruising on the Mojave, I saw three rescues of distressed ships, and a chase of one of the most troublesome foreign "rummies," the Silver Arrow, of Newfoundland.

It is no sham battle practice when a cutter or patrol boat locks horns with a "rummy," but a fight to the finish—the Coast Guard enforcing the law and "rummies" defying it.

I felt twinges of sympathy for them myself until I saw and experienced an actual "rummy trailing."

Then I saw that the "rummy" resorts to every known trick of attack and defense and shows a total disregard of the safety of peaceful merchant ships.

The fleet of the rum runners is in two divisions.

One's the "mother ship"—a foreign craft which brings its cargo off the shore line of American waters—and the speed boats, or "contacts." These are American owned and operated craft which milk the "rummy" and speed under the cover of night to land their load on a point ashore when it is hauled away by trucks.

About 2 p. m. on Thursday the 16th of October, the look-out on the Mojave reported a "rummy" off the starboard bow. Picking up the vessel with binoculars, I saw a low stream line boat. The hull was the blue grey of the water. She had no masts and gave the impression of a swift slinking streak with a dorsal fin making a streak of foam behind her.

Soon after she was sighted she was identified as the Silver Arrow, of Newfoundland. She was heading in shore.

Captain Parker overhauled her after a four hour chase, and the "rummy" hove to. On her decks along the gunwale were secured barrels of Islay, a potent Scotch "flavoring" which is cut many times to dupe the land-lubber who buys his stuff "right off the boat."

The value of the Silver Arrow's cargo was approximately $150,000.

When the skipper of the "rummy" realized that the Mojave had the jump on him, he stopped his engines and we drifted alongside. His crew called to the Coast Guard cutter's men—impudent, contemptuous remarks. They were stalling for dusk to come under which they could try to make a getaway. We were close enough to the Silver Arrow to talk without raising our voices.

I asked which of the men on board her was the captain, and a rugged Scandinavian stepped to the bow and said he was.

"What's a woman doing on the Coast Guard?" he called. "I ain't never seen none before and I've run from lots of patrols."

Before I had an opportunity to answer him he volunteered:

"You was taken off a rum boat, huh?"

"Have many 'rummies' got women on board, Captain?" I asked.

"Sure—the bigger ones has women running the stuff—ships out of Newfoundland—but I ain't got none in my crew."

"What do you think of the Coast Guard, captain?" I asked.

For a moment he hesitated while he edited the curses his mouth formed and then snorted, "Not much!"

"Some folks ashore think they help you fellows—don't they?" I queried.

At that question, the whole "rummy" crew burst out in derisive laughter.

"They ain't no help—unless making it so tough to land this stuff and guarding the coast could be called helping."

"You see they've stopped so much of it that if we get a load ashore we get more dough for it because it's harder to get."

Just as soon as dark blotted out the horizon the Silver Arrow got under way. But the Mojave's powerful searchlights were upon her, throwing her hull into a white relief against the black sea. At sudden intervals the Arrow changed her course to try to outsmart the cutter, but it availed her nothing. The Mojave's captain kept one leap ahead of her maneuvers.

That falling from two obscure flat stacks, the rummy laid down a dense

POLICE CAPTURE EMIDIO FARGE; HEARING TONIGHT

Youth Escaped from St. Joseph's Protectory and Returned Home

GUNS ARE IDENTIFIED

One in Whose Home 'Arsenal' is Located Gives Much Information

Emidio Farge, the youth who on numerous occasions has caused the police many worries, is again in the clutches of the law. He was taken into custody yesterday morning as he lay sunning himself along the banks of the Delaware River in the vicinity of the Sea Scout ship, near the Anchor Yacht Club.

Farge, when arrested, had a .25 automatic pistol upon his person and a box of bullets.

"Hands up!" ordered Chiefs McGee and Jones as they approached Farge from opposite directions. The youth told the officers that he would not shoot them.

He was taken to the municipal building and will be given a hearing tonight on the charge of robbing the Cohen Economy Hardware store on two different occasions. According to the police he has admitted his guilt.

Farge has, it is alleged, committed numerous robberies here and when his home was searched some of the loot was recovered. He was taken before the Bucks County court and there convicted and sentenced to St. Joseph's Protectory.

Farge remained at the protectory about one week and then escaped. He returned home a few days ago and quarreled with his sisters, one of whom, it is said he struck over the head with a mirror and then shot twice at a younger sister.

Police again searched the Farge home on Lincoln avenue and found rifles, pistols, ammunition and other loot, identified as having been stolen from stores here.

Farge gives the police considerable information about his past performances.

Mrs. Francis E. Walz presided at the organ and the bridal party entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march. Prior to the entrance of the bride and groom and their attendants, Rev. Francis E. Walz sang "O Promise Me," and when the party reached the altar, Rev. Walz sang "I Love You Truly."

Mrs. Schober, the bride, was attired in a dress of white bridal satin, her long veil being fashioned of lace. Her arm bouquet was composed of white chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid, Miss Schober, was gowned in light blue crepe de chine, her arm bouquet being formed of yellow chrysanthemums.

A reception at the church immediately after the ceremony, was attended by 40 relatives and friends of the couple.

Following a two weeks' motor trip to Florida, Mr. and Mrs. Schober will take up their residence on Ford avenue. They are the recipients of many lovely gifts.

Both Mr. Schober and his bride are graduates of Albright College, Reading. Mrs. Schober has been teaching in the junior high school in Waymart. The groom is employed in Philadelphia.

A ROMANCE OF RADIO

Radio is acting in the role of a frontiersman in Alaska, with the result that industry and civilization are replacing the wilderness of a half century ago. It is, therefore, not surprising that Alaska is radio-minded and that radio is being used for communication in possessions of the United States in a manner unparalleled by any other country in the world.

The credit for the exploration of this vast northern region goes to the signal corps of the United States army. For the last 30 years this work has been going on, first with the telegraph and cable, and now with the radio, until today there is a veritable network of wireless communication.

Alaskan industries and newspapers depend for their very existence upon radio communication. It gives them the necessary contact with the outside world and with remote quarters of their own little world. In Alaska communities can be separated by only a few miles and still be remote within the usual meaning of the word.

Besides serving Alaska, the Alaskan system of radio communication is proving of value to the United States. One of its greatest services in this respect is the meteorological information collected in the North and transmitted to the United States by radio.

The admonition to think twice flatters many persons.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 30.—

Introducing Margaret Livingstone, probably the country's foremost radio widow.

The new Mrs. Paul Whiteman says she came to Hollywood to do some picture work, because she saw Paul only at breakfast and at dinner. His radio duties carry him to the office at 9 a. m. and at night he directs his band at the Edgewater Beach Hotel.

"Understand," she says, "I'm not complaining. The marriage of two professionals can't be like an ordinary marriage. Paul and I are very happy with ours."

"By coming out here I can make a few pictures and then go back and see him whenever I want. I'll be back with him on Thanksgiving and will stay until after the first of the year."

As told yesterday in this column, Margaret also owns a Los Angeles apartment house and is building another. Her business interests require trips to the Coast.

One of the things not generally known is that she and Whiteman met as a result of her work in the F. W. Murnau picture, "Sunrise." Doubtless you recall her weird dance in the fog-shrouded strains of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

When the picture was released, Whiteman asked to meet her. Later, they renewed their acquaintance when both were working at Universal.

Of course, you are familiar with the story of how Whiteman finally won her by going on a diet and losing many pounds.

SNAPPY ANSWER.
B. P. Schulberg's quick-wittedness won loud plaudits at the recent party where the motion picture publicity men were hosts to the press.

Allowing himself to be questioned by anyone in the crowd, Schulberg fired back pithy answers on many serious problems of the industry.

Finally spoke up a Hollywood magazine editor: "I've been trying for a week to make an appointment with you through your secretary. What's the matter?"

Master Lester Engle, of Walnut avenue, entertained a few of his friends at a Halloween party on Thursday afternoon. The table was decorated with the traditional cats, witches and pumpkins. The kiddies enjoyed the delicious refreshments which Mrs. Engle had prepared. Those present were: Jack Scott, Locust avenue; Edward Katzmar, Edgewood avenue; Albert and Richard Vickers, Walnut avenue; Stanley Sharpe, Walnut avenue; Audrey Lathrop, Walnut avenue; Richard and Kenneth Rossbauer, State Road; Barbara and Patsy Engle, Walnut avenue.

"She's being tactful," snapped Schulberg. "I told her I didn't want to see you."

MORE GOSSIP.

Herbert Brenon has bought a chicken ranch in Surrey, England. The John Wayne-Josephine Sazens romance has cooled off. Marian Marsh gets star-billing in "Under Eighteen," the picture she finished on her eighteenth birthday. Mervyn Leroy establishes a new record by having a dentist on the set to work on his teeth between scenes. Dick Whiting and Leo Robin, the song-writers, have returned to do the numbers for Maurice Chevalier's picture. Whiting is buying a home. Will Rogers played host at Fox to Dwight S. Davis, Secretary of War. Dorothy Mackall won't go to Honolulu until after the first of the year.

The reason is another picture. Ina Claire may do "The Last of Mrs. Cheyne" on the local stage before going East. Morgan Galloway and Dorothy Appleby, who are in the films now, got married the first night they had a date. They had known each other in the show "Young Sinners."

MYRNA'S NEW TYPE.

The regeneration of Myrna Loy will continue in her first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture. Once seen only in siren roles, she now is to play the quiet sister in "Emma."

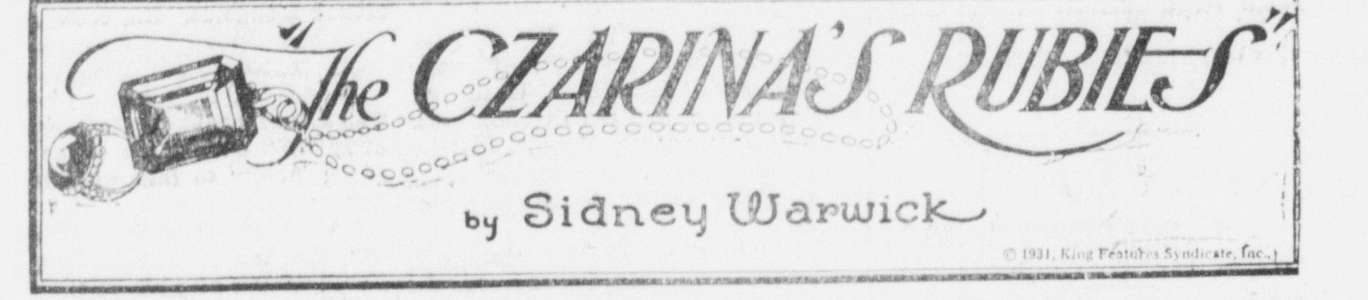

This is Marie Dressler's starring picture.

ARLEN STAYS ON GROUND.
That airplane vacation of Dick Arlen is off. On the verge of his departure for Vancouver, Paramount cast him opposite Miriam Hopkins in "Two Kinds of Women." This is the film version of Robert E. Sherwood's play, "This Is New York."

William De Mille directs the picture, which will go into production next week.

Paramount is planning an important sequel of pictures for Arlen to follow up "Touchdown," which is said to be a hit.

DID YOU KNOW
That, prior to "The Dove," Dolores Del Rio had never worn an evening gown in a motion picture?

Katharine Faring, granddaughter of a Russian prince, is the rightful owner of the missing Czarina rubies of sinister fame and fabulous value. Trying to recover them for her, Paul Federoff is murdered at Monksilver, a vacant country house, and Frank Severn is kidnapped and carried there unconscious. His servant, Cryke, is murdered.

Jim Wynter, friend of Severn and of Katharine, tries to rescue Severn, is injured and drugged and awakens in the home of mysterious Dr. Martell. Recovering, he takes Katharine and his friends, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Grayson, to Severn's country home, Beggar's Court. There a search reveals a concealed stairway and a locked door in the ruins of an ancient chapel. The stub of one of Dr. Martell's cigars lies on the stairs. Sant, Severn's lawyer, reluctantly agrees that the door be forced and goes to engage a blacksmith. Wynter and Grayson encounter in a nearby village a man Grayson recognizes.

NOW GO ON

CHAPTER XXXI
It was not until they were nearing Beggar's Court that Bill, wrestling with that elusive memory, was suddenly able to pin it down.

"I've got it!" he broke out in a lowered voice to Jim as he drove. "It was when I was in America some time ago—and I was shown over Sing-Sing prison."

"Sing-Sing! You don't mean that this chap Isham was a prisoner?"

"That's just what I do mean. I forget the details, but I'm pretty sure of one thing. Isham—only the name the governor gave the man couldn't have been Isham then or I'd have remembered it—was in for life. And almost certainly that meant for murder."

Jim Wynter looked startled.

"But if he was serving a life sentence—" he began.

"How is it we find him here in this English village? That's what I'm wondering too—only I'll swear it's the same man. I remember that thin cynical face too clearly! Queer," went on Bill Grayson thoughtfully, "that we should find an ex-convict, probably a notorious ex-convict sentenced for murder, living close by Beggar's Court after all that's happened there lately. I wonder what John Isham's real name is—and what brought him to this particular corner of Essex?"

EXCITEMENT
They had turned in at the gates of Beggar's Court. Almost as the car drew up by the door they saw the figure of Sant, hatless, with a white excited face, running toward them from the direction of the strip of woodland that screened the ruins.

At first as he came up he was too breathless to speak. Then:

"Did you hear?" he broke off excitedly.

"Hear what?" cried Wynter. And then he remembered that as they left Isham's cottage a faint distant sound like an earth-shaking thud had reached them.

"The ruins—Martin always said they weren't safe, and I laughed at him. My God; if you'd stayed—" crashed like a house of cards! . . . Jim and Bill Grayson raced across the grounds toward the ruins, followed by Sant. The outer walls were still standing, but the dust from the fall of debris within hung like a cloud above them.

"I was in the house when I heard it—like the thunder of an avalanche!" panted Sant.

They ran to the entrance and peeped in. The interior was white with hovering dust like a sand-storm. Through it they saw that the inner wall, with its concealed doorway, had crashed down, covering up the flight of steps leading down to the vaulted door, covering up the door itself.

The light of the waning afternoon was none too good and it was quite without result that they examined the heaped up debris for any sign that a blasting charge had been used. But probably this confusion of overthrown shattered masonry would have baffled even an expert eye.

The air within this enclosed place was full of an acrid tang from a smoldering fire of damp dead leaves and garden rubbish not a dozen yards away in the grounds; the set of the wind was driving the smoke across the ruins. Had it been burning when he and Bill were here before? Wynter very much doubted it. And had there been a special reason for lighting that fire within the last half hour?

The drifting smoky fumes, as it struck Wynter significantly, with that deepening suspicion coloring all his thoughts, were searching enough to have disguised or drowned any after-lingering scent of a spent explosive.

What secret did that door hide to make some person or persons so determined at any cost to keep it closed?

under a small mountain of piled up collapsed masonry.

Jim Wynter exchanged glances with Bill. Whatever the secret behind that door, it was safe-guarded now.

Jim Wynter's eyes were full of a swift suspicion as he stared into that shell of crumbling, roofless walls, choked with a cloud of flying dust.

What had been a solid standing wall less than an hour before now was a mere shattered heap of ruin, that had swept like an avalanche over the sunken stone steps, burying that under ground door, 100 feet deep in the piled-up wreckage.

Why should that inner wall have collapsed so suddenly without warning? So suddenly—and so conveniently for any one who might have definite reason for wanting that door to remain closed.

"It's none too safe in there, Wynter!" cried Sant quickly.

Impatiently, Wynter shook off the detaining hand. That sudden suspicion in his mind made him want to inspect the fallen wall at closer quarters. He and Bill Grayson made their way through the moldering arched doorway into the gray twilight within the ruins.

SUSPICION
"Bill, doesn't it strike you as curious, that wall crashing just when it did?" said Jim Wynter dryly. "Barely quarter of an hour before that door into the vault was to have been forced! A very timely accident—if it was only that!"

Bill Grayson guessed the thought in the other's mind. That same suspicion was in his own too.

"You mean, was it one of those accidents?" that is deliberately engineered?"

Wynter nodded.

"If I had to bet, I know which I'd bet on, Bill. After all, it would not have taken much in the way of a high explosive to do the trick—and who's to prove anything?"

The light of the waning afternoon was none too good and it was quite without result that they examined the heaped up debris for any sign that a blasting charge had been used. But probably this confusion of overthrown shattered masonry would have baffled even an expert eye.

Eight Day Patrol Aboard Coast Guard Cutter Brings Thrills to Bucks Authoress

smoke screen, speeded up her engines and jockeyed back and forth behind it. Hot on her trail, through the choking, blinding smoke and stench of chemicals, Captain Parker drove the cutter after her—blasting the siren incessantly to warn the rummy to get out from the curtain of smoke or risk being run down by the Mojave.

The Silver Arrow laid her smoke screen in the vicinity of the Nantucket shoal. It was her intent to lead the 17-foot draft cutter into waters where she might be wrecked.

A seaman kept casting the sounding line on the Mojave—"by the mark seven!"—"by the mark a half and six!"—"giving a gruesome warning of the shallow waters were approaching. The Silver Arrow changed her course suddenly to head out to sea—the Mojave after her to keep her from steaming inside the 12 mile limit where she could make a contact.

From in shore, a blinking of lights was reported by the lookout... the contact "speaking" to the Silver Arrow... from the rummy answering blinks... "She'll try to lose us now," observed Capt. Parker. "Those signals are changing the contact point—and the Silver Arrow captain will try desperately to reach her."

No sooner had he spoken than the rummy changed her course, reversing it, taking advantage of the wide swing the Mojave would have to make to turn completely around.

"I'll be seeing yuh!" yodelled the Canuck cook to me as the rummy widened the space between us... "Tell your government that we tried to get you to come aboard for chow, and that we gave you grasshoppers' eyebrows on toast with a chaser of whiskey and champagne and a drop of absinthe."

Methodists Conclude Anniversary Services

Services commemorating the 143rd anniversary of the Bristol M. E. Church came to a close last night with the holding of the usual Sunday evening service. The speaker was the Rev. J. Perry Cox, secretary of the City Missionary and Church Extension Society of the Philadelphia Conference.

In point of attendance and the character of the programs presented tonight, the week marked a new epoch in Methodist church annals here. Each service was addressed by a speaker of note and music of high caliber was furnished.

At the service last evening the Rev. George F. Hess, pastor, was presented with a basket of magnificent chrysanthemums as a token of appreciation from the various church societies. The presentation was made by Doron Green, president of the Board of Trustees who in well chosen words highly complimented the Rev. Hess upon the success of the services which were being brought to a close. The attendance at all of the services has been exceptionally good and there has been manifest widespread interest on the part of the membership and friends of the church.

Saturday evening the anniversary banquet was held and the guests were preachers of the other Protestant churches in Bristol. The Rev. John C. Wilson, D. D., Philadelphia, was the speaker and he gave an inspirational and challenging sermon. Dr. Wilson is an orator who is well known here and his address Saturday evening was of his usual standard.

The banquet was held in the Sunday School room where 125 partook of a chicken dinner. There were songs by organizations of young folks and good fellowship and frivolity marked the evening. Doron Green was the toastmaster.

Sunday morning the Rev. George J. Burns was the speaker. His sermon aroused his audience and numerous testimonials were given at its conclusion.

Says Climatic-Control Is Big Forward Step

"The most important forward step in motoring since the development of the self-starter," is the way Mobilgas, now with Climatic-Control, is characterized by Nicholas Listorti, operator of the local Rusk-Lehigh service stations.

The effects of wind, rain, high or low altitude, changing humidity or extremes in temperature all affect the "engine heat," to which gasoline is extremely sensitive.

With Climatic-Control, Mobilgas can now automatically adapt itself to these changing "engine heats" to give uniform performance under all these conditions.

Miss Grace Burroughs At Courier's School

(Continued from Page 1) child can put together successfully almost any dish known to the art of modern cookery—if he follows instructions. That is the basis of all the teaching of the De Both Home Makers' Schools of which Miss Burroughs is a member. It has been demonstrated over and over. Cookery isn't magic or genius—it's a simple business with very definite rules. The De Both Schools teach the rules. Two plus two are four. No matter what you do or think or say you cannot alter that fact. Cooking is just as elementary and just as simple and just as governed by rule.

When Miss Burroughs tells her audiences how a thing is done she demonstrates it. When she says a cup of this, two cups of that, and a tablespoon of the other cooked so many minutes will produce so and so, well—it always does. When you, if you are a housewife, go to the kitchen to make a pie, or a cake, or a dinner, do you know it will be a success? You should. Miss Burroughs will prove to you that such assurance can be based on certainty.

UNWISDOM

Three men drove up to a Bristol coal dealer's in a big automobile. The driver asked for a 50-cent bag of coal. The dealer was sorry, but the smallest unit sold was a 60-cent bag. "I haven't got 60 cents," said the autoist, and drove away.

A charitably disposed person arranged for some people who needed shoes to go to a Bristol shoe dealer that night and get them. The dealer waited, but they didn't arrive. The next night they came for the shoes. "I waited for you last night," the dealer said. "Yes, I know you did, but we couldn't get the car started."

These incidents are genuine.

Will Rogers said in his radio speech the other night, when he contributed his services toward the campaign to raise unemployment relief funds, "This is the only country in the world going to the poorhouse in an automobile."

And it's needless.

The buses and trolleys provide all the transportation anyone can need, at a fraction of the cost of driving one's own car.

A private car is a luxury when ownership of it deprives one or his family of such things as coal and shoes.

Be sensible! If you cannot really afford to drive your own car, put it up for the winter and ride the buses and trolleys.

And even if you can afford to drive, there's really economy in riding the trolleys and buses.

The Senior Trip

We arrived in Washington at 11 o'clock on Monday, October the nineteenth. It was a fine day; in fact, we had beautiful weather all week. As soon as we arrived in the Union Station our baggage was sent to the hotel and we took buses for the Capitol.

We toured the entire building visiting the room of the Supreme Court and the Senate Chamber. Our guide upon learning we were from Pennsylvania pointed out the seats which our Senators occupied. We also climbed up to the magnificent dome from which we could see all over the city and which can be seen from any part of the city. A certain group were so fascinated they became lost and could not find the way out.

At one o'clock we went to the hotel and had lunch. Immediately afterwards we left for the Franciscan Monastery. This is the most original and one of the most beautiful churches in the United States. In it are represented the catacombs of Rome and many other interesting things.

On Monday evening we visited the Congressional Library and saw the original Declaration of Independence, the smallest book in the world, and shelves of other books.

We all arose early on Tuesday morning, had breakfast, and went for a sightseeing tour of the city. We saw the Zoological Gardens, many feet below the city level, the Episcopal Cathedral, Arlington Cemetery, and the Lincoln Memorial. That afternoon we went to Annapolis. Here we had the pleasure of shaking hands with Governor Ritchie of Maryland. We also inspected the Naval Academy. That evening we attended the theatre and saw Joe Cook in "Fine and Dandy."

On Wednesday we climbed Washington Monument, where those who were not too tired to see got a beautiful view of the city. We then went through the Smithsonian Institute and returned to the hotel for lunch. That afternoon we had a very pleasant boat trip to Mount Vernon. Some of us rode up the hill to Washington's house in a rickety old wagon. We all had our pictures taken in this and enjoyed it very much, even those that walked got there first.

Our last evening in Washington was free to do as we liked. On Thursday we went into the White House. The East Room is ordinarily the only room that is open to visitors, but we had a special permit and were allowed to go through more of the house.

That afternoon most of us spent buying souvenirs and walking about the streets. Then we sadly bid the Hamilton Hotel good-bye and took a bus for the station. We left Washington at 5 o'clock and reached Bristol at 8.30. We had our dinner on the diner which was a new experience for most of us.

Our Honor Roll

The following pupils have an average of 90 or over in their academic work, and at least a B in gym, shop work, music, art, or home economics for the first six-weeks' period:

Florence Brannigan, Anna Marion Di Rocco, Olive Whyatt, Elinor Finney, Arthur Fuoco, Isabelle Nills, George Herman, Genevieve Cherubini.

Hallowe'en Celebrations

On Friday afternoon at 3.30 Miss Harrison's home room held a Hallowe'en party. The committee in charge of the party included: Viola Monaco, chairman; Evelyn Force, refreshment; Mildred Ellis, entertainment; and Eleanor Petrik, treasurer.

The 8-2 section held a Hallowe'en party at Phyllis Wieser's home. The evening was spent in singing and dancing.

Miss Peck, the eighth grade geography teacher, is going to begin the unit method in her classes. This method permits each individual to work at his own rate of speed. The fast workers will not have to wait until everyone in the room has accomplished his work.

Miss Peck selected some girls from the eighth and ninth grades to help her to put on a program at the W. C. T. U. meeting on Wednesday evening. The girls enjoyed the experience very much.

The 8-5 section had a party on October 30 in the school-room. The president of the class selected five people to take charge of the party. The people chosen included Ardine Pye, Evelyn Stephenson, Ruth Van Etten, William Halpin and John Van Sciver.

Senior Football Championship

The Junior Class defeated the Sophomore Class in football last week by the score of 19-0 on the high school field. The game was fast and furious with many long runs by both teams. Girotti, Strong, Flatch and Van Aken starred for the winners, while Hunter, Clifton and Gibson did good work for the losers.

By winning this game the Juniors have gained the right to play the Seniors for the championship of senior high school. The game will be played some time this week, the date being undecided. From all appearances it will be a hard-fought game from start to finish. May the best team win.

The Rambler

The 11BY and 4X girls have received the banner for the "Rambler." The room which has 100% subscriptions for the school paper has the honor of having the banner on display in the room. The first issue of the Rambler appeared last Tuesday, and will be on sale once every two weeks at the price of five cents a copy. Subscriptions may also be secured for thirty cents a semester.

Pompeo Piazza, former football and track star, has again resumed his studies at Bristol High.

Girl Reserve News

The Girl Reserves of Bristol High School are celebrating their "Golden Jubilee" during the first week in November. This junior branch of the Y. W. C. A. has been established since 1881. The organization was not started in Bristol, however, until 1918.

To celebrate this event the club will give a supper in the High School, on November 2nd. We feel fortunate indeed in being able to secure Mrs. Grace Livingston Hill as our guest speaker. Mrs. Hill is a famous novelist. Miss Margaret MacDonald, a Girl Reserve Secretary from Philadelphia, will also be present.

The girls who have formerly been members of the Girl Reserves and are not out of school, have been invited to attend this supper.

On Sunday, November 1, a number of girls will go to the Arch Street Methodist Church. Here they will take part in a service to be given by the Philadelphia and Germantown organizations in celebrating this Golden Jubilee.

"Her Song"

The name of the musical comedy to be given this year by Bristol High School is "Her Song." Practice starts Monday, November the first, when the director, Miss Grace Mackey, will arrive.

A brief synopsis of the story is as follows:

Emil Kroslein, saddened by the desertion of his wife, who went on the stage, tries to write a song, and he completes all but the last few bars. Emil's daughter Christine after quarreling with a childhood sweetheart, Craig Randall, leaves her father alone with a broken heart and goes to New York and on the stage.

The second act is back-stage in a New York theatre, and here Christine and her mother meet.

In the third act Christine returns home and she and Craig are reconciled. Emil, consoled by a vision of his wife, then finishes his song.

Besides this human interest story, which is different from the usual theme of a musical comedy, there are a number of good comedy characters, peppy songs, and beautiful girls.

The characters include:

Emil Kroslein, Robert Wright; Craig Randall, George Herman; Hans O'Hara, Joe Britton; Adolph Blumberg, Rena Swan; Paul Gartin, John McCarthy; Mr. Blossom, Vincent Galzerano; Fritz, Sidney Popkin; Christine Kroslein, Mildred Dyer; Anne Kealey, Helen Morganti; Mrs. Rufus O'Hara, Josephine Di Lizio; Adele Despane, Thelma Wallace; Rae Fantaine, Esther Reynolds; Gladys Van Tine, Ruth Reitenbaugh.

Election of Officers, Tenth Grade

Last Tuesday, ballots were distributed by the election committee. Kenneth Clifton, representing Miss Bigelow's room on the committee, was absent.

On the ballots the question was asked whether the pupils wanted initiation or not. The pupils were also told to put down the two teachers they wished for class advisors. All teachers were available except Miss Dolbow, Miss Garrigue, Miss Webber, Mr. Shoemaker, Mr. Hertzler and Mr. Brown.

The results of the election were as follows: President, Phyllis Kallenbach; vice-president, Ruth Collins; secretary, Vivian Green; treasurer, Howard Lovett; advisors, Miss Thomas and Mr. Bird.

The vote on initiation was 100 to 18 in favor of it.

Monitors

Junior and Senior High School both have Monitors. The Monitors are stationed all around the halls and stairs during the changing of the classes and during lunch hour. Their duty is to promote order at these times.

In trying out ninth grade girls for chorus parts in the High School play, "Her Song," Miss Taylor has discovered some very good voices. At least three or four girls were picked from each section.

The Sunshine Club

Tuesday, October 27, 1931, the president, Frieda Endom, called the meeting of the "Sunshine Girls." Then the secretary, Ethel Keers, read the minutes of the previous meeting. After that the program for the day began. Gertrude Pre read a story called "Adventures in Camp." There were: a reading by Ida Miles, current events by Frances Tortu, jokes by Charlotte Rathke, and word formation by Josephine De Lorenzo and Doris Hilbert. Emma Renner was on the program, but because of absence on account of illness she was unable to take part.

HIGH SCHOOL DROPS GAME
AFTER HAVING BIG LEAD

(By Leon Schiffer)

Counting their chickens due to their leading at half time by the score of 18 to 9, the Cardinal and Gray eleven dropped their third consecutive game through a let-down of fighting spirit and overconfidence to the Lansdale Eagles Saturday afternoon on the latter's gridiron by the close score of 18 to 20. Over 1,000 dyed-in-the-wool Maroon and White rooters saw their team crash through victory.

Incidentally, this is the first game which Lansdale has won this season, thus smashing to smithereens their title of the "scoreless wonders."

The Bristol aggregation was larger, faster, smoother and more spirited than the averages and according to the "law of averages" should have won. But the "law of averages" does not hold water in a football game and that is where the invaders made their greatest mistake, letting down in their offensive onslaughts and becoming too over-confident.

However, the greatest tribute should be paid to the Maroon and White's plucky members who were in the game, fighting until the last second and to the Lansdale rooters who inspired their Alma Mater onward to victory.

The Cardinal and Gray scored their first touchdown during the early minutes of play in the first quarter. Receiving possession of the ball on their own 35 yard line, the Bristol eleven quickly assembled into their offensive attack. With Cole and Bornice bearing the brunt of the attack the ball was advanced in two plays, each play netting 15 yards respectively, to the Maroon and White's 35 yard mark. Swan then on an off-tackle play broke loose, shook off two would-be tacklers, straight armed a third and with the angry cries of the Lansdale horde, ringing in his ears, raced over 35 yards of Lansdale turf for the first touchdown of the game. Neindorff, Bristol's burly tackle, failed to place-kick the extra point.

In the latter part of the period Cole scored the invaders' second touchdown on a fake spinner after he, Bornice and Pico had advanced the ball more than 50 yards to place it on Lansdale's 10 yard line. The try for the extra point again failed.

The second canto saw Coach Townsend, the Bristol mentor, send in his "shock troops" to relieve his regulars. Incidentally, it was in this stanza that the Cardinal and Gray scored their third and last touchdown of the game. With only a few minutes to play Bristol received possession of the pigskin on their own 45 yard mark. Starting an aerial attack which steadily gained power as it reached the peak of its stride, the oval was soon nesting on Lansdale's 3 yard line by virtue of two passes—Leighton to Barrett for a gain of 35 yards, and Leighton to Tosti for a gain of 17 yards. It was then only a matter of a center plunge to score the third tally for the invaders and Narcissi, who was picked for the job, succeeded in wriggling over the goal line for Bristol's third consecutive six-pointer of the game. Leighton failed to convert the extra point.

However, the second half was a "different story," proving to be Lansdale's half. Refreshed and boiling from a coaching speech received from their coach, Ed Jeffers, former Ursinus stellar backfield man, plus the spirit of "to do or to die," the Maroon and White soon found themselves.

Receiving possession of the ball on Bristol's 35 yard line after Taylor had run back the oval for 25 yards on the kick-off, the Lansdale attack began to function. On an off-tackle thrust Keating pounded over 35 yards of the Cardinal and Gray's territory for the besieged's first tally of the day. Taylor on a placement kick converted the extra point.

Taking advantage of the breaks, the Lansdale Eagles soon had their second chance to score. In the latter part of the period, Bristol, after a courageous stand of the Maroon and White's furious offensive onslaughts received possession of the ball on its own 3-inch line. Cole attempting to kick out of danger punted poorly and the pigskin taking a backward bounce came to rest on the Cardinal and Gray's 3-foot line. A. Hostelly, seeing the opportunity to break into the headlines, scooped up the oval and stepped over the goal line for Lansdale's second six-pointer of the game.

The fourth quarter saw the besieged rise up and wrest victory from the hands of the Cardinal and Gray in a triumphal march to the goal line.

Bristol having received possession of the pigskin on their own 25 yard line, Cole kicked to Taylor, who was playing deep in alien territory. With a perfect wedge for interference the Lansdale track star, gobbled up yardage after yardage, until finding himself in the open and with the angry cries of the Cardinal and Gray pack behind there remained only the goal line and victory. However, Raymond Pico, the invaders' safety man was not to be cheated of his quarry and so after a gruelling run of 50 yards the Lansdale speedster was brought to bay on the Cardinal and Gray's 3-foot line by the Bristol Mayor's quick line by the Bristol Mayor's quick line by the Bristol Mayor's quick line.

The last few minutes of play saw the Lansdale Eagles battling furiously to prevent the invaders' aggression from scoring.

Next Saturday, the Cardinal and Gray eleven will journey to Sellersville-Perkasie where they will play the latter's eleven.

PAUL
--SON OF OLD ALONZO, WHO IS PLAYING QUARTERBACK
ON HIS DAD'S CHICAGO TEAM,

SUCCESSFUL transmission of athletic prowess from father to son is about as rare as inherited mental capacity. The offspring of a mighty ball player or boxer, for example, is usually a mediocrity if he's even that. The genius most often is lucky to turn out a placid business man or a social stuffed shirt. Parental fame in all such cases is a handicap, rather than a help, to the aspiring hopeful. History and legend set discouragingly high standards for the son to attain. And so genius in athletic or intellectual fields disappears, as it were, with the illustrious father in contrast with whom the son seems but a light fleeting shadow when the spotlight's turned upon him.

Of course, there are exceptions. Perhaps, the Heston brothers and Michigan football backs, may yet challenge the lordly fame of their father, the wonderful Willie. That's almost an impossible goal, of course, because their "old man" generally is rated as "the greatest fullback of all time." He was chief pile-driver at Michigan early in the century when Coach "Hurricane" Yost was the wizardly impresario of those electrifying "point-a-minute teams."

His sons Jack and Willie, both look promising in the Michigan backfield though recent reports have it that "Junior," discouraged because he was assigned to Squad B, would quit football. Jack did seem to be the better of the brothers as a grid star but high hopes were held out for Willie who, some say, is "the spit image of his old man" in everything but ability to roll up touchdowns and carry that ball through the line. "Junior" is highly intelligent and sensitive. The weight of carrying a mighty name is arduous in athletics. At this writing, efforts were being made to keep Willie on the squad, according to reports from Ann Arbor. Indeed, he was making good with the Wolverines though overshadowed by his brother.

And then there's Paul Stagg, Chicago's ace quarterback, who plays under the masterly and paternal eye of the Maroons' "Grand Old Man" now celebrating his fortieth year as athletic master of the Midway. "Pat" Page's son also plays with Chi.

Almost two decades ago, Walter Camp, Jr., son of the "Father of American football," starred at halfback for Yale.

The list of inherited grid talent could be carried into the hundreds at least. However, few sons have equalled—and none surpassed—their dads when the latter have been rated as superstars in football or other athletic activities. Copyright, 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
